

COVER STORY

The redshirt season is a tool used in collegiate athletics for a variety of reasons, but ultimately it presents a student-athlete with a unique opportunity to learn. Whether it's getting better acclimated to the college game, learning his position, or improving his conditioning, every redshirt freshman should use that first year to absorb as much information as he possibly can.

Javon Baumann and Kyle Molock did just that.

Baumann is a hulking presence, a 6-foot-8 250-pound bruiser with wild hair and an unrelenting desire to bang under the boards with some of the best the Atlantic 10 has to offer. Baumann most recently averaged 4.7 points and 3.8 rebounds while shooting 62.7 percent from the field in 19 games for the Licher Baeren team in Germany's Pro-B league.

Born and raised in Germany, where basketball plays second fiddle to soccer and other sports, Baumann was always a fan of the game, and models his style of play after some of the players he grew up watching.

"I'm going to run as fast as I can, post up hard, and get rebounds," he said. His favorite players growing up were Dennis Rodman and Charles Javon Baumann, a native of Germany, joined the Saint Joseph's program in 2012 before redshirting the season. His physical presence in the paint will add valuable forward depth to the Hawk lineup.

Barkley, and he has put a real emphasis on being active and aggressive on both sides of the ball, just like his idols. When he hits the floor, Hawk fans are in for a real treat.

Baumann has many tools that were refined during his redshirt year and he credits his coaches and teammates for instilling in him the competitive fire that he hopes to bring with him every time he steps out onto the court.

COVER STORY

"I really tried to improve, and last year I had the chance to play against C.J. [Aiken], Halil [Kanacevic], and Ronald [Roberts]," Baumann said. "It was really good competition and it made me better. I'm just trying to get better in the post."

With the departure of Aiken, the team will rely on Baumann's size and energy on both ends of the court. In fact, the most important piece of advice he received during his redshirt year concerned that very thing.

"Be aggressive," he was told. "I just want to do my best and leave everything on the court."

Off the court, Baumann is an avid chef, a skill he's shared with his family for years.

"I used to bake with my grandma a lot. I really like to cook," he said. "My favorite dish to cook is probably pasta, it's fast." His love of food was also a factor in his decision to come to Saint Joseph's. He was very interested in the school's food marketing program, of which he is now a student.

Kyle Molock had a much different experience during his redshirt season.

The 6-foot-2 point guard from Dublin, Ohio, had recovered from a torn left ACL in 2010 and was averaging 19 points per game through eight games as a senior at Dublin Coffman High before tearing his right ACL in January of 2012. After re-tearing his ACL during summer workouts, Molock dedicated last year to getting healthy and preparing himself for this season, which he understandably was anxious to get underway.

"I'm very excited," Molock said. "Being in front of the fans and in that atmosphere is something I haven't experienced in a while. I'm definitely ready to get back to that."

Along with the constant rehab on his knee, Molock took advantage of all the learning opportunities he was presented last year.

"When certain situations would arise in practice or a game, [the coaching staff] would say 'are you paying attention? You're going to be expected to do this next year,'" Molock said.

COVER STORY

Kyle Molock spent his redshirt season rehabbing from a torn ACL. He looks to Minnesota Vikings star Adrian Peterson, who was voted the NFL's MVP a year after ACL surgery, for inspiration.

According to Molock, his knee is good to go, even though he was held out of exhibition games in Europe over the summer for precautionary reasons.

"I've been playing in every practice and in our scrimmage. There's no reason why I shouldn't be able to play right away," Molock said.

"Last year, the only thing I focused on was rehabbing and getting ready for this year," he said. "As a redshirt, I was able to travel with the team and experience the road atmosphere. I used last year as a learning process. I won't have to go through that freshman curve this year."

ACL injuries are prevalent in all sports, but more and more athletes are coming back sooner and stronger. Molock uses Minnesota Vikings running back Adrian Peterson as his inspiration.

"He was better than before," Molock joked, citing Peterson's MVP season immediately following his return from injury.

Molock has dealt with multiple injuries to both of his knees already, but it's not something he dwells on. He is focused on this season and the past is just that, the past.

"I've been injured and gone through some stuff, but what basketball player hasn't?" he said. "Anybody can get hurt at any given moment on the court. Although I've had the surgery and done the proper rehab, my chances are the same as anyone else. All I can control is going out there and playing as hard as I can."

All his hard work paid off on November 13 when he made his collegiate debut, playing five minutes in the Hawks' win over Marist at Hagan Arena.

COVER STORY

Molock grew up in Delaware before moving to Ohio, so he had knowledge of Saint Joseph's style of play and head coach Phil Martelli, due in large part to the team's historic 2003-04 season. Not only was he familiar with the school and its system, but he also found out he shared a lot of the same ideas with Martelli when they talked during the recruiting process.

Baumann has played in both of SJU's games this season, at Vermont and at home against Hagan Arena. His size and energy will provide the Hawks with a spark off the bench.

COVER STORY

Molock made his collegiate debut in the win over Marist. He is eager to return to the game day atmosphere and to play in front of the Hawk fans.

"When he recruited me, everything matched with what I was looking for," Molock said. "The style of play, what he expects of me...it was a perfect fit all around."

There has been much talk this season about Saint Joseph's playing at a faster pace and making a concerted effort to push the ball up the court, something that brought a smile to both Kyle Molock and Javon Baumann's faces.

"I'm a pretty athletic kid. I like to push the ball in transition," Molock said. "As long as we're forcing the action, only good things can happen."

With the additions of Molock and Baumann to the team's already potent nucleus, the Hawks are looking to make a lot of noise in the Atlantic 10 this season.

TV/RADIO COVERAGE

The Saint Joseph's Sports Network (SJSN) marks its 24th year of operation in 2013-14. Since its beginnings in 1990, SJSN's coverage of Hawk athletics has grown and included Phil Martelli's HawkTalk radio program and the nationally-renowned HawkTalk television show, which ran for 15 years.

For the third consecutive year, every Saint Joseph's game will be broadcast on one of the top sports radio stations in the nation, CBS Sports Radio 610 (WIP-AM). This marks the most comprehensive radio package for Hawk basketball since the 2005-06 season. The station will also be the home for Phil Martelli's HawkTalk radio show, which will air on Monday evenings from January to March.

Hawk fans everywhere will be able to hear the broadcast of every game through audio streaming at the Hawks' official athletics site, www.SJUHawks.com, which is provided free of charge. Fans will soon be able to take those broadcasts on-the-go with the SJUHawks app for mobile devices.
